ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Dr Sue Duchesne coordinates the teacher education programs at the University of Wollongong’s Bega Campus. Sue has teaching experience in primary and secondary schools, as well as in the tertiary sector. She currently lectures in educational psychology, child development and pedagogy. Her research interests include parent involvement in schooling, the roles of peers in language learning and teacher education, with a particular interest in pre-service teacher development.

Dr Anne McMaugh is a Lecturer in the School of Education at Macquarie University. Anne teaches in child development, educational psychology, inclusive education and pedagogy, with a focus on childhood social development. Her research interests encompass child and adolescent education and development, with a special interest in the developmental and educational experiences of children with disability and chronic health conditions. Anne has teaching experience in primary and secondary schools, as well as in the tertiary sector, and has conducted research in school, hospital and community education settings.
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book is the result of the combined efforts, energies and encouragement of many of our colleagues, students, friends and family. We thank the team at Cengage Learning Australia who have supported us in the development of this fifth edition. Ann Crabb, Duncan Campbell-Avenell, Nathan Katz and Kylie McInnes have all been involved in our discussions about text design, photographs and text support materials.

Our colleagues and students in teacher education at the University of Wollongong and at Macquarie University have contributed to our understanding of the field and have continual input into our thinking about educational psychology and how it can be taught.

We have consulted various classroom teacher colleagues, whose practical classroom experience has made an important contribution to our text. In particular, we would like to thank the following teachers who have provided ideas and content for the text and its supplements:

- Chrisanthi McManus, Mumbulla School for Steiner Education
- Gabbie Stroud, St Patrick’s School
- Tracey Hughes-Butters, Lumen Christi Catholic College
- Ann-Louise Clark, Sapphire Coast Anglican College
- Alyson Whiteoak, Jervis Bay Public School
- Ursula Brown
- Anne Warburton
- Cheryl Russell.

Our thanks go to the children who have contributed ideas, images and content to the text: Natalie, Jake, Jesse, Etienne, Odette, Katie, Kirsty, Jed, Tully, Nicole, Hannah, Hannah, Kai, Henry and Pete. A special thank you to our families who have provided constant support, good humour and encouragement along the way. This edition of the text builds on the vision and work of Kerri-Lee Krause and Sandra Bochner in earlier editions; we would like to thank them for their support and wisdom.

Cengage Learning and the authors would like to thank the following reviewers for their incisive and helpful feedback:

- Mohamed Alansari, University of Auckland
- David Armstrong, University of South Australia
- Helen Boon, James Cook University
- Donella Cobb, University of Waikato
- John De Nobile, Macquarie University
- Wendy Goff, Monash University
- Alison Hine, University of Western Sydney
- Sean Kearney, University of Notre Dame
- Caroline Mansfield, Murdoch University
- Tina Moore, La Trobe University
- Jill Scevak, University of Newcastle.
